

January 3, 2005

RE: Michael Stillman, Ph.D.

To Whom It May Concern

It is a pleasure to write this letter of support of Dr. Michael Stillman. I have worked with Michael for the past 18 months. In my opinion, he is clearly one of the most talented and capable medical writers that I have had the pleasure of working with.

Dr. Stillman and I have collaborated on numerous medical abstracts and publications. He has always been professional, courteous and helpful. His medical knowledge, ability to focus on the most relevant material, organize, and present the material in a coherent fashion is outstanding. He has always been willing to extend himself in order to complete a project on time, even if the timeline is quite tight.

On the basis of my dealings with Mr. Stillman, I consider his performance as nothing less than outstanding. I have the highest praise for his professional ability and his personal attributes.

Sincerely yours,

Lawrence B. Cohen, M.D.
Associate Clinical Professor
Mount Sinai School of Medicine